Over Bars Santandar, 2d May, 1847.

To the Editor of the American Eagle.

We were detained the second day after the capture of Tuxpan to blockade this place, the entrance to the river on which is cituated the town of Soto de Marina distant some 45 miles. Observing a proper degree of caution on our arrival off kere, we sent our boat sabore, with sufferent arms concealed in her for the protection of the crews, and came to anchor in the brig near the opening of the bar, at sufficient distance to observe, by the sild of the glass, the movements ashore, and, in case of necessity, to give a fair range to play a game with our teninch shells. On the arrival of our boat at Pisca, a village a little inside the bar, the few people, neither diffident nor beilligrout, approached the boat with countenances alternatively expressive of surprise, curiosity or gladness.

Without the allablest reserves they volitely accounted.

Anna.

Notwithstanding all the appearances of friendship prudence dictated caution in all our movements; which has ended in our peaceable survey of the bar, bay and river, with accurate soundings, bearings, &c; and we now only await the arrival of our gallant Commodors from Tabasco, to go on any other service he may detain us to perform—preferring, however, if the choice was our own, more active service than that of this month—On Commodors Perry's arrival, I doubt not a boat expedition will be fitted out to proceed up the bay and river to Soto de Marina—the distance is 45 miles. We are looking hourly for the Commodors and the rest of the squadron. After the performance of our service here, our next duties will be performed on the coast, to the southward and eastward somewhere.

The letter we copy below, from the Washingto correspondence of the Journal of Commerce, con tains another chapter in the history of the culpable conduct of this Administration with other countries and that the results were invorable to peace. I can say, positively, that the whole story is a humbug.

Letters were received here on the 17th, from private sources of great Intelligence in Jalapa, which are not particularly favorable to peace. One of these letters says that Santa Anna's resignation had not been accepted.—
Boubts are expressed whether any election of President will be held as legal. Santa Anna, at the head of his rabble army, which he took care to gather around him before he ventured to show himself in Mexico, is in actual power, and will be so until he shall be again soundly drubbed at Rio Frio.

The Administration have, after some consultation, sent a dispatch to Gen Sout on the subject of his Proclamation, approving of it, with some exceptions.

If they have also clothed him with more power as a acquisitor, and relieved him from the embarrassment of consulting with or acting in concert with, Mr. Trist, they have then done something toward expediting a peace.

The Fabius reperts the brig Falm Hallett, the only American vessel in port, loading for New-York. The British bark Syren, with coffee on board valued at $90,000, parted her cables on the night of the 20th uit, went ashore and was wrecked. Vessel and cargo a total loss, except some 500 bags of coffee aswed in a damaged state. The Fabius brought over a cargo of 3,672 bags coffee.

Guzman, the leader of the late Revolution, together with the unpunished of his followers, about 100 in number, were yet in prison at Caraoas. For some the impression was general that no more executions would take place, and that those remaining in prison would consequence of another outbreak at Rio Chico, a village

took place very lately, it was supposed that the sentence, which was to be made known on the lat inst would be more severe, at least on Guzman.

IMPORTANT DECISION .- A letter from Keokuk

IMPORTANT DECISION.—A letter from KeckukLee County, lowa, dated on the 5th inst. states, on undoubted authority, that Judge Willisms had that morning decided, after a week's argument and patient examination of the case, in favor of the decree title in a suitbetween the New-York Company and Wright—thus establishing, the letter says, the title, by a Judge who was elected by the settlers professedly on the ground of his opposition to the decree.

The Judge, in the conclusion of the case, said that he confessed that his opinions on this question had all been against the decree, but, after a thorough examination of the law and the facts, he had no doubt of the validity of the decree, and that it must be sustained. Lee County is the seat of the colebrated Haif-Breed tract of land, and this decision involves the homesteads of hundreds of settlers in the County.

Without meaning to say anything of the merits of a matter with which we are perfectly unacquainted, a decision such as that now announced must excite a good deal of feeling. Still, it is better that the title to so much valuable land should be quieted, than that it should be the subject of perpetual litigation.

The state of things in Rapides would seem, from the following extract of a letter from a friend there, not to be altogether so cheering.

'I have been somewhat indisposed, and have seen but few of my neighbors, and the few I have seen, are so down in the mouth in consequence of the injury done them in their crops by the late hall-storm, that they have but little to say about matters in general. I think, from what I can see around me, that if some other disaster does not befall the poor Red River planters before Fall, they may yet make tolerable Cotton crops. Those who are going into the Sugar business, appear to be in very good spirits, and I entertain no doubt myself of their ultimate success.
